GLENDALE COUNCILMEMBER JOYCE CLARK FOCUSES ON HOW WATER SERVICES WORK ON “GLENDALE TODAY”

Glendale, Ariz. Councilmember Joyce Clark (Yucca District) takes a tour of the city’s Water Services Department in the latest edition of “Glendale Today,” slated to begin airing Friday, Feb. 10, at 8 p.m., on Glendale 11.

Councilmember Clark’s guests on the program include the city’s Water Services Supervisor Frits Soumokil, Lead Water Services Representative Ron Gouger and Superintendent of Water Services Mark Fortkamp.

The program gives a behind-the-scenes look at how expert technicians at Glendale Water Services provide customers with safe, reliable, high quality water and wastewater services that ensure public health and the vitality of our community.

During the show, Clark learns about wastewater collection and visits with Field Customer Services crews who walk approximately 10 miles per day and read 63,000 meters per month throughout the city.

From specialized equipment that discharges high-pressurized water through the city’s 700 miles of sewer and waterline, keeping pipes clear and operational, to hi-tech robotic cameras used to inspect pipes and detect damage or blockages, viewers will learn firsthand how Glendale Water Services use innovation, quality standards and industry best practices to continuously provide exceptional water and wastewater services 24 hours a day every day.
